

BACKGROUND
(November 2020)

Fultz, et al. v. AFSCME, Council 13, et al.

THE EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Fairness Center represents seven public employees who resigned from AFSCME, Council 13 and who are being forced to financially support the union. After the employees resigned their union memberships, Council 13 confirmed that they were no longer union members, but claimed that they still owe full union dues, and the Commonwealth is still deducting full union dues from their wages. The Plaintiffs have brought this lawsuit as a class action, seeking relief for many other public employees who are former members of Council 13 and who are being forced to pay full union dues as nonmembers. The Fairness Center has previously represented 13 other former members of Council 13 who have faced similar issues after resigning their union memberships.
